These prices are supplied, delivered, installed rubbish gone. How much time do you really want to spend driving to and from the retailers, comparing prices and waiting for delivery men? Prices in blue it's all done*

So compare even the Rinnai systems above to the complete supplied installed price bottom row of bottom table. If you went out and bought a Rinnai even say you got free delivery. The total at the end is $1250 as opposed to a Panasonic top of the range coming in at $1350. The Panasonic quality exceeds Rinnai in way over $100 worth of ways. Quieter, lasts way longer, has more functions, looks better, smells better, the Panasonic even taste better*

*Author hasn't actually tried to eat a Panasonic but those little magic stars enable any bullshit claim to be made and then invalidated almost immediately. One wonders whether it's socially acceptable to carry around a bunch of little stars to be used when talking to chicks in bars or clubs. "yes I own the great big yacht that's parked outside.. I used the Ferrari to tow it here *** The triple stars absorbing all the lies and enabling the bullshit artist to retain some sort of credibility. You'll notice the only stars on this page are the ones relating to the taste of an air conditioner. If anybody wishes to prove the author wrong, please go right ahead.***
